Share price weakness a chance to accumulate

Event

Following our downgrade of Frencken on 26 February, its share price has declined 7% to 62 SG cents. We believe the weakness in its share price is a good opportunity to accumulate. Frencken is a good proxy for the economic expansion in the Eurozone.

Impact

Positive business momentum still intact. Frencken has guided for positive YoY growth in 1Q18 across all its business segments. Interestingly, the underperforming industrial automation segment is expected to pickup due to improvement in demand for production equipment for storage drivers. On a macro level and medium-term outlook, Eurozone business activity remains at a 12-year high according to IHS Market PMI data, providing a basis for sustained growth for the group. As a recap, ~50% of its sales is derived from Europe.

Valuation & Action

Upgrade to BUY after the recent sell-down. We upgrade to BUY, with a fair value of S$0.72 based on 12x 2018F EPS. We continue to like Frencken's diversified business model and list of blue-chip customers, which helps provide stability in cash flows and dividend pay-outs.

Decent 3.0% dividend yield in 2018E. The group declared 1.66 SG cents final and 0.73 SG cents special dividend for 2017, bringing full-year dividend to 2.39 SG cents (3.6% dividend yield). We expect the group to be able to pay dividend of 2.0 SG cents for 2018F based on a pay-out ratio of 33%, implying a 3.0% dividend yield.

Risks

Frencken's main business segments are cyclical in nature. A spending slowdown in its key business segments, namely semiconductor, automotive and analytical machines may impact margins and new orders. However, its track record has shown revenue resilience which may be due to the well-diversified mix of its business.

Industry and company review

Eurozone economic growth still going strong. Although falling slightly from its 12-year high, output growth in the euro area remained robust in February 2018. The final IHS Market Eurozone PMI Composite Output Index posted 57.1 in February, well above the average of 53.0. The manufacturing sector again registered stronger output growth than services. Both sectors also continued to enjoy the best periods of expansion for seven years.

2017F Performance driven by 71% YoY growth in semiconductor segment. Frencken's higher-margins mechatronics division improved 33% YoY to S$92.2m in 4Q17 from S$69.6m in 4Q16, driven mainly by increased sales in its semiconductor, medical, and analytical segments.

Decent dividend yield of 3.0%. We forecast 2.0/2.0/2.2 SG cents dividend for 2018F-2020F, based on a conservative payout ratio of 31%. Frencken has historically rewarded shareholder even in tough times – it paid out a dividend of 0.5 SG cents in FY12 amid a loss of S$11.8m that year. We believe its dividends are sustainable given that its healthy operating cash flow (which averaged S$20m p.a. for FY14-16) is greater than our dividend payout estimate of S$8m for FY17.

Figure 4: We expect dividends to remain stable over the next three years on the back of steady growth in its key business segments. Our dividend estimates are based on a 35% payout ratio.

Frencken – valuations still undemanding despite recent share price run-up. Frencken's PE and PB ratios are both lower by 20-30% compared to peer average. Frencken is a laggard and may perhaps be under the radar of many investors given its lower profile relative to peers. Venture, Hi-P, UMS and Valuetronics are trading at 13-23x forward P/E and may be trading at a premium to industry average in view of their larger size. Still, smaller peers like Fu Yu, Memtech, Micro-Mechanics and Jadason are trading at 9x-15x forward P/E.
